The Major-General of the second Division is commanded by his excellency, Governor Blount, to call into service the organized volunteers, who are destined for the defence of New-Orleans and the lower Mississippi. The whole of the volunteers from the second Division are included in this order. They will accordingly rendezvous in Nashville on Thursday the tenth of December, prepared to descend the river without delay. The Cavalry will provide themselves with pistols and sabres ; the Infantry with rifles, as far as it may be convenient ; for which they will be allowed a fair compensation. Such of the non-commissioned officers and privates as bring with them a blanket, for their own use, will be paid for it a full price. They are particularly requested to furnish themselves with this article.

On their arrival at the place of rendezvous, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates will receive two months pay in advance : and the non-commissioned officers and privates will receive seventeen dollars, for the half pay of one year's clothing.

The Major-General informs the volunteers, that upon a consultation with the Field-Officers, it has been resolved, that the respective companies which form the detachments, will appear in uniforms. Dark blue, or brown, has been prescribed for service, of homespun or not, at the election of the wearer ; hunting-shirts, or coats, at the option of the different companies, with pantaloons and dark colored socks. White pantaloons, vests, &c. may be worn upon parade. As the expedition will not terminate under five or six months, and will include the winter and the spring, the volunteers will see the propriety of adapting their clothing, in quantity and quality, to both seasons.

The field officers will wear the uniform which is prescribed for officers of the same grade in the army of the United States. Company officers will conform to the same regulation, if convenient ; otherwise, they will conform to the uniform of their companies.

The constant and honorable zeal which the volunteers have evinced, excludes the idea that any one of them will voluntarily absent themselves, now that they have received the final summons to repair to the field of honor and of danger. If sickness, inevitable necessity, or real absence from the state, should detain any one, he will make known his situation to the commanding officer of the company. In all cases where this is not done to the satisfaction of the Major-General, the absentee will be placed upon the list of deserters, exposed to the scorn of his fellow-citizens, and the severe penalties which the laws will inflict upon him.

Captain WILLIAM CARROLL, of the Nashville volunteers, is appointed Brigade-Inspector to the organized volunteers, and THOMAS H. FLETCHER is appointed second aid to the Major-General, in the place of Major John Coffee, promoted. The officers and privates of the volunteer detachment, are commanded to honor and obey them as such.

The colonels commanding regiments will distribute these orders by express ; the expence of which will be reimbursed by the Assistant deputy quarter-master.

ANDREW JACKSON,

November 24, 1812. Major-General 2d Division, Tennessee.

— General orders — Jan 15. 1813.

The Major Genl regrets that there should be a man belonging to his detachment, so far lost to honesty, to his duty, to his reputation, and the good fame of the detachment, as to lay his hands on any property belonging to any citizen of the country through which we pass — such conduct was pointed at in my order of the 13th Decr 1812, and expressly forbidden under pain of punish ment agreable to law — The Major Genl from information recd has the mortification to believe, that persons belonging the de tachment have invaded the rights of our fellow citizens, by taking their property without compensation, and in open violation of the Genl order of the 13th Decr last

The Major Genl enjoins it upon all officers under his command to use vigilence in detecting all those who have or may hereafter attempt to take any property from citizens of the country through which we pass and all officers coming to a knowlige of any such acts and not making it known immediately to the major Genl shall be arrested — The Major Genl had hoped from the military order that produced the assemblage of the present band of patriots under his command, not one ~~should~~ would be found among them, but would have lost his life, before he would have done, or now do an act, that would tarnish his own reputation or the credit of the detachment — If there are any such, the detachment must be purified by their immediate punishment — We go to conquer our enemy — to reap laurels — not to tarnish our reputation and that of our country by acts of rapine and villainy all guilty of it shall be punished — When the detachment halts at villages the Capts are ordered to place centinals at the mouths of their lotts to prevent the soldiery from leaving them which centinals shall remain there untill otherwise ordered by the officer of the day — It is further ordered by the Major Genl. that the roll be called every night at nine oclock and at the beat of the reveille in the morning — Reports are to be made out daily, and returned to the Brigade Major — all officers are charged with carrying into effect the above order; and any failing to do it, shall be arrested — Captains Williamson & Renshaw will report daily to the adjt. of the first Regt.

By order of the Major Genl.
